Revealing Fate analyzes this chart in a systematic and analytical way—taking into account the relationships between and among certain aspects. For men the Four Pillars are read with the Yang cycle; for women they're read with the Yin cycle. This dynamic is similar to how one may read a direction as clockwise and counterclockwise or forward and reverse.

Your personal Celestial Element Sign is categorized within the day pillar (marked in red text) and the following digressions are based on the interaction among all Celestial Branches, Earthly Stems, Zodiac signs, Five Phases, and Ten Gods within your Four Pillars of Destiny. For information regarding these terminologies please visit www.revealingfate.com.

Significance of Your Celestial Element Sign

You are born with the Yang Wood sign (Day Master)—the equivalent of the towering tree, straight and strong. You're caring and naturally lead at your best; overly bossy or manipulative when at your worst. You're firm yet kind but at times your stubbornness overrides and you are impulsively inclined to change things (or people) around you.

You're exceptionally tall for an Asian, smart and witty at times, yet you shoulder a lot of responsibility as a way of showing you care because you feel happiest when knowing your efforts are effective at helping or assisting others to better a situation.

Significance of the Year Pillar

The Year Pillar represents the dynamics of your early life—typically from age 1 – 20 years

It also represents the relationships with your parents, elders (such as uncles and aunts), grandparents, and in some cases legal guardians.

Water bears the Metal element. Yang Water sits atop the Monkey—which is a Yang Metal sign. This Metal allows for the positive reinforcement of Water, which acts as a resource for you. These resources may be material, emotional, or spiritual, but all provide nourishment. However, Metal also acts as restrictor because Metal invades Wood. This means that your parents and the elders of your family are distinctly strict or terse. This makes you feel controlled by them and insecure but for the most part you obey regardless. Furthermore, while both parents are strict one of them is likely to act as more of a nurturer while the other as more of an enforcer.

Significance of the Month Pillar

The Month Pillar represents the dynamics of your period of life from age 21 – 40 years

It also represents the relationships with your siblings, peers, colleagues, and friends. These are the most influential people in your life during your personal development stage.

As you approached the end of your teen years, your once youthful ideals were exchanged for something more cynical in nature. This was also a time where you started working. The employment experience was decent however due to the consistent prevalence of Metal within the Major Flow years while you worked you felt like an opportunity was missed from an avenue(s) that you failed to explore. However, in general you managed to save up some money here and there.

It appears that you are the eldest among your siblings, and it is likely that you have one sister and one step-sister—but it is unlikely you have many brothers and sisters. You have somewhat of a distant or slightly fickle relationship among your siblings, but they do try to assist you from time to time. You should branch out and make new friends and attend more social gatherings.

Your social life with friends and peers could use some expansion; you should branch out and make new friends by attending more social gatherings where interaction can be made easily and expediently—like at conferences, clubs, and other related venues.

Significance of the Day Pillar

The Day Pillar represents the dynamics of your period of life from age 41 – 60 years

It also represents relationships with the self, significant other(s), and with close friends as they truly understand and accept the real, core 'you.'

Yang wood sits on top of Monkey which is a metal sign. The monkey sign itself also contains Yang Water and Yang Earth which both benefit and restrict you simultaneously. When you have nothing to say, you are quiet; when you have something to say you're unbridled in your deliverance of speaking your mind. You may have been somewhat shy as a child, however as you entered your early twenties you began to have an inclination for a dictatorial style of communication.

Your significant other(s) might behave like a workplace superior. Your relationship with your them will experience mood swings from time to time; at best you guys are lovey-dovey and at worst there will definitely be bickering and arguments. Remember that this can be mitigated with mutual effort from both sides in order to facilitate consent and resolve your more serious of issues. Your significant other(s) is the nourishment you need to feel secure in your own heart. They are an easy-going, explorative person yet tend to be flighty and a bit complicated or analytical. You are able to simplify their issues and downsize their insecurities by helping them to focus on what really matters when facing the complicated situations they may create for themselves or place themselves within. However, throughout this process you remain a good listener regardless of any disagreements you may have regarding their disposition and conduct.

Your ideal partner(s) or spouse(s) is someone capable of generally understanding the whole of your heart's extent—because by nature you have an unassuming exterior but surging inner core.

Significance of the Hour Pillar

The Hour Pillar represents the dynamics of your late life from age 61 years – when you've completed this life

The Hour Pillar also represents the relationships with your offspring, younger adults, and your grand-children.

You will have a great relationship with your children and grandchildren. They will actually support you very well when you're getting old. They regard you like a best buddy or pal, and they will generally bring joy to your heart overall. Your life in retirement is not grand per say but it will be good-enough to draw attention from others in an envious way.

Additional Analyses

Five Phases Analysis:

The net transformative tendencies of your elements yield a deficiency. This manifests as a lifelong sense of constant need for improvement, involvement, work, and effort—in all tasks and projects. You tend to give more energy than you receive in this life. You should strive towards equilibrium via the simultaneous embellishment and avoidance of certain elements. Your Four Pillars are fond of Wood and Water, respectively; and they dread Metal and Earth, respectively.

Nature and Disposition Analysis:

You're a creative, courageous individual with the power to dream big and have the courage to voice your truest opinions. You are brave, staunch, firm, will-powered, and capable of confronting difficulties and great hardship while accepting challenges. You possess a powerful form of originality and pursue the success of your goals with intense ambition.

When at your best you're quite imaginative, conceptual, ingenious, and especially able to showcase your talent and consistent deliverance when interacting within the realm of business and commerce; at your worst you're overly demanding, excessive in your expectations of others, and difficult to associate with or maintain contact with.

Wei Qian-Lie's Fortune:

The day master acquires its domain upon Wei (Yin Earth Branch; Goat Zodiac). Its remaining energy is bestowed from Chen (Yang Earth Branch; Dragon Zodiac), signified and rooted on firm Earth. If Chen and Wei are both Earth, and with the presence of Wu (Yang Earth Stem) at the Time Pillar, then although one stands with established rooting one cannot acquire wealth by such means. In order to accommodate the occupancy of both wealth and oneself—since this wealth is heavy and the self is light—one generally needs assistance from wood and nourishment from water as a means to balance both the wealth and the self, so long as there is no deviation from this construct.

Shao Kang-Jie's Four Characters:

The four words which poetically represent your complete life journey are Qì Jiù Lián Xīn (棄舊憐新): “Relinquish the Old and Pity the New.” This anthological excerpt is widely interpreted for a variety of conditions yet remains true among all scenarios independent of scale. It serves as an analogy to depict your tendency to encounter difficulties when abandoning old ways as a requirement for adopting new way(s). This process is markedly challenging for you since you usually do not adopt change fully or use it for its greatest potential. Your adaptation to change is usually strife with vexation, frustration, or regret; you may understand that you need change or express a desire to do so however this is often arduous to enact or seemingly unfeasible to execute regardless.

Feng Shui Analysis:

The direction of East and North are most beneficial to you. Choose a bedroom located on the North or East side of your home and position the headboard of your bed to follow suit (so that your head points to one of these directions). Choose a wooden bed frame (avoid a metal one) and decorate your interior with wooden furniture and a green, black, or grey color scheme.

Certain regions of the world, countries, and hemispheres are also more beneficial to you. The best places to travel or live are China, Taiwan, Japan, and Korea. You may perhaps benefit from engaging your social life more often, establishing and exchanging social capital, experiencing new places, making new friends, and allowing yourself to run with new ideas more heavily valued for their creativity—lessening the emphasis you typically make on the prospect of acquisition when involved in the decision-making process.

Propositions for the Day Master:

Your luckiest numbers are three and eight, however one and six are also lucky.

The Spring season and cool breezy weather are particularly preferable for you, although winter cold is also beneficial.

The months of wood and years of rabbit and tiger are comparatively lucky; the months of fire and years of pig and rat are also somewhat lucky.

Your most auspicious times are between the hours of three and seven AM, however the times between nine PM and one AM are also auspicious. You generally fare better at engaging in meaningful work during the late night to early morning and should avoid all important matters and serious activity during the late afternoon.

Your auspicious colors are Green (with lighter green as more favorable), Black, and Grey. Avoid White, Metallic colors, Yellow, and Brown (with darker brown as more avoidable).

Conclusion and Suggestions

As a child, you were often directed on how to behave or act to such an extent that you learned to be quiet, since elders felt justified in directing or managing your growth. During your youth you had a brief crush on someone whom you never really expressed your interest for, or for there was no mutual interest on their part. This is indicated by the Indirect Resource and Seven Threats of the Ten Gods in the Year Pillar.

You have an inherent ease at making money or acquiring material wealth, sometimes in largely unexpected or unconventional ways. This is indicated by the presence of Direct Wealth and Indirect Wealth of the Ten Gods within your Four Pillars.

Since 2012, and especially in the last few years, this time has been rather hard on you as you have endured many setbacks, struggles, and hardships. Unfortunately, the decade in which you now live of the Major Flow cycle contains far too many instances of Fire and Earth. However, this will end by the year 2022. You will get some relief between 2019 and 2020 since this year transitions with Water. The year of 2020 is an extremely important one; in this year the Earthly Branches transform to Water, making it very auspicious for nurturing your Four Pillars. This year marks the greatest potential in all of your life to nourish yourself. In this year you should seek guidance, resources, comfort, and make sound investments of your most personal (emotional and spiritual) endeavors. However, be particularly careful in 2021 since your risk for incurring injury (related to your blood and circulatory system or by some type of accident) is increased, and such injury may be incurred as a result of a heated argument, some type of confrontation, or robbery attempt on yourself. This is indicated by an observation of the 60-year Cycle demographics.

In this year of the Monkey you are also significantly challenged or restricted since Metal invades Wood and you already have two occurrences of Yang Metal (Monkey Zodiac) among your Earthly Branches—and with 2016 this makes three. The Monkey influences your Four Pillars by directly weakening your Day Master even further. This is not good since your it is not good for you since the net transformative tendencies of your elements is weak for the Wood element. This represents your superiors—which means your boss(es) and supervisor(s). In such circumstances you feel burdened, stifled, short of breath, and looking for escape. Individuals who require Wood and Water simultaneously will experience such marked hardship for these next 14 years, however adjustments may be made to ease the challenges presented during this period. However, this drawback will generally make a turn for the better in 2022 for you. This is indicated by the presence of Metal as the Seven Threats of the Ten Gods and its significance within your Year Pillar and Day Pillar.

1. I started a new job about 6 months ago. The company is a very interesting set up and there seems to be a lot of loose ends. The job is very lenient and they have been very understanding with absences. It's an accounting position for a shipping company, and has had its ups and downs. However, I have a hard time dealing with my supervisor. Should I continue with the job, or move on?

Your particular issues with this supervisor come from you suggesting an improvement for the workforce but were rejected, and then they started targeting you for minor things that happen here and there. You have a few options that come with their own benefits and setbacks. If you choose to stay, you could try wearing shirts (if they don't enforce the uniform rules) that feature the Tiger or Rat—literally with graphics of the Zodiac animals, or with single colors of green, black, grey, or light blue as well as combinations of these.

The Tiger symbolizes Wood and the Rat symbolizes Water. These are your most needed components. With the Tiger, you will receive a large workload but receive little recognition for completing it since the disgruntlement at hand. With the Rat you must learn to restrain yourself in order to confront difficult situations with superiors either directly or indirectly. It may be wise to just keep your head down for a while. If possible, try to stay at this job for at least one consecutive year since you started and make sure that your performance is infallible so that they will have little or no reason to find excuses for accusation to be used against you further.

If you are opting to embellish in Water (as in “going with the flow” or finding the easier and more expedient path), be aware that your superiors will constantly try at provoking you. For this reason, you must learn to restrain your emotional outbursts and be as calm as you possibly could be. Remind yourself: just another six months. By then you could choose to continue your studies instead.

2. I have not finished my college degree, but at the moment I am working full-time. Would this be a good year to go back to school and finish?

If you choose now to instead study, then similar phenomena will likely follow suit; you'll probably experience similar obstacles related to social drama. We advise you to stay at your current job for the total consecutive length of at least one year employed in order to allow you a fruitful endeavor in gaining basic experience which may be covered on your resumé (and not left out due to an unfavorable result from this conflict).

If you opt for embellishing in the Wood element as a means to choose your path (such as enrolling in school) then beware of speeding or drunk driving throughout the summer and fall periods. There are hints that when accompanied by recklessness this year and the next may easily yield car accidents due to the strong influence of Metal.

3. Since this is my Zodiac year, are there any dates in 2016 that I should be extra careful?

Because you have a tendency to drink heavily and drive fast when presented these opportunities, you really need to prepare some friends to be your designated driver if you decide to do so. For this entire year you will need to be cautious of reckless or endangering behavior, but at autumn (with October and November) this is the peak of inauspicious times for you.
